Re: Principal, Overlay Management – OMERS

Dear Hiring Team,

I have spent the last seven years building and signing off on the kind of multi-asset, macro-informed, derivatives-adjacent portfolio analytics that the Principal, Overlay Management role in OMERS GMAS is built around. At Ortec Finance I delivered strategic and tactical asset-allocation studies – building stochastic scenario generators that mapped macro regimes to equity returns, correlations, and funding-ratio drawdowns, then running VaR/CVaR optimization and risk-decomposition analyses on Ortec's GLASS platform to size tactical tilts and duration, inflation, and currency overlay strategies for pension-fund clients. I presented those views and recommendations directly to investment committees. At Moody's Analytics, where I currently hold delegated sign-off on multi-asset institutional portfolio outputs for engagements in the $5-25bn range, I extended that analytical foundation into a multi-scenario cash-flow and exposure projection engine supporting base, stress, and reverse-stress regimes – the substrate for drawdown management and tail-risk analysis at the total-plan level.

The combination this role asks for – linking macroeconomic regimes to equity behavior, translating those views into overlay positions using liquid derivatives instruments, and operating inside formal risk budgets and governance guardrails – sits across the spine of my career. I want to be transparent about one aspect: my derivatives depth is strongest in rates, FX, and inflation swaps in the ALM context; I have not been a day-to-day futures or equity-options execution trader. What I bring is the analytical and governance infrastructure surrounding those instruments – sizing, scenario-stressing, risk-decomposing, and presenting overlay positions – which is where the Ortec and Moody's work has consistently sat. I would expect to build the equity-futures execution fluency quickly in the role.

What draws me specifically to OMERS is the transition toward a total-portfolio investment approach: Overlay Management is the seat where macro judgment, systematic equity risk premia signals, and disciplined implementation converge, and where the marginal decision moves risk-adjusted outcomes for 665,000 members. My Ortec roots are in exactly that pension-investment-committee setting, and my Moody's governance discipline maps onto the institutional framework this capability requires.

I am Toronto-based, available for interviews immediately, and can start approximately four weeks after offer acceptance. Resume attached; references on request.

Sincerely,
